Newly added claims constitute New Matter contrary to applicant's statement. A section of specification pointed out by applicant does not support new claims. For example, Fig. 14 related said section of specification shows that a base polymer containing an electrically conductive filler and microshells made of a base polymer and filler of claim 15. In other words, said microshells do not contain said electrically conductive filler. Also, claims added after final rejection will not be entered even if they had support in specification. The recited related patent of Assignee will not be considered since applicant failed to submit a formal PTO-1449 with a fee since such statement alone for consideration of any prior art after final rejection would be an improper procedure.
